

ABSTRACT

The invention features methods and systems in which wavelength-tune PSI data is analyzed in the frequency domain to produce spectrally separated frequency peaks each corresponding to a particular pair of surfaces in an interferometric cavity defined by multiple pairs of surfaces. Each frequency peak provides optical path length information about a corresponding pair of surfaces in the cavity. As a result, the interferometric data from such cavities provides simultaneous information about multiple surfaces.

20296178 doc